About the Artist

The NYFB Centennial featured artist, Robert Childress, was the illustrator for the Dick and Jane reader primers that were popular in the 1950's and 1960's.

Childress was born in 1915 in South Carolina. He paid for his Clemson University education by going door to door and offering to paint families' coat of arms. After graduation he worked for advertising agencies, and during World War II he promoted agricultural and farming products through his illustrations.

In 1949 he worked in New York City where he created ads for a number of well-known products, including Coca-Cola, Mobil, Frigidaire, Wonder Bread, Campbell's Soup, Buster Brown Shoes and many others. A decade later he updated the Dick and Jane reading primers, which were initially published in 1930. Mr. Childress used his children, family and pets as the subjects of his artwork for the series. He was a friend of artist Norman Rockwell, and they both painted in the realism style, with similar shades of humor. He also painted a number of Cornell University scenes and was commissioned to paint the portraits of several Deans at Cornell. He has painted at more than 20 universities.

Seven of the New York Farm Bureau paintings are now available for purchase as prints. Proceeds will support the New York Farm Bureau Foundation for Agricultural Education, Inc.
